THE MARQUARDT CONCERT.

Another Crowded House at Their Second Appearance.

There were very few vacant seats at the second Marquardt concert on Saturday evening. The principal performers played with their usual excellence, but were chary of accepting encores. Mr. Marquardt's violin solos were all applauded and especially "Gypsy Dance" and the air and variations from "Moses" on one string.

Madame Marquardt's selections were listened to with rapt attention and the first "Au Rif de la Mer" received a well merited encore. Miss Jessie Axtell's singing added much to the pleasure of the evening. Her song, "Ave Maria" with harp, organ and violin accompaniment by Mr. and Mrs. Marquardt and Professor Herold had to be repeated. Prof. Herold was very acceptable as an accompanist, but his piano was much too loud at times. In response to general request another concert will be given tomorrow evening.

The Wrongs of Man.

If he dies folks say his vices killed him.

If he lives they say he is so tough the Lord doesn't want him.

If he dresses stylishly he is called a dude, and if he doesn't he is a slouch.

If he marries he is no account and if he remains single he is blamed for it.

If he stays at home nights he's a spoke, and if he doesn't he's a rake.

If he is good-looking he is set down as conceited, and if he isn't he's called as ugly as sin.
